Community profile Greater Halswell Area

(Census area units: Halswell East, Halswell South, Aidanfield, Halswell Domain, Halswell West, Westmorland, Henderson’s Basin, Oaklands East, Oaklands West, Kennedy’s Bush)

Key demographics

- Usual resident population count
  - 2013 Census: 11,000
  - 2016 Census: 13,000
  - 2019 Census: 23,000

- Median personal income earned per household
  - 2016 Census: $100,000

- Employment status
  - 2016 Census: 10,000 employed, 3,000 unemployed

- Population change
  - 2013 to 2016: 20%

Social infrastructure mapping

- Community development support organisations
  - Schools
  - Community facilities (Crown-owned, Universe-owned)

Community resilience mapping

- Risk / opportunity
  - 1b: Community development principles
  - 1c: Community resilience mapping
  - 2a: Social infrastructure mapping
  - 2b: Natural environment
  - 2c: Earthquake impact analysis

Future risks and opportunities

- Recovery opportunity
  - Community resilience principles

Earthquake impact analysis

- Community environment

  Social environment
  - Community organisations
  - Community participation

  Community development
  - Community organisations
  - Social infrastructure mapping

  Natural environment
  - Natural environment
  - Natural environment
  - Natural environment

Community profile Greater Halswell Area

Greater Halswell is represented as the southern part of Christchurch. Located in an area known as the suburbs, small-scale of the city center on Stent Highway. In recent years, new subdivisions have created (urban) values and replaced the green belt separation from the city, including Christchurch's area.

With the south-west of Christchurch being one of the South Island's largest urban growth areas, the area of Christchurch's population has increased in recent years. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, there is a higher proportion of children aged 10 years and older (10,000 per 1,000) over water. The Halswell Junction Road is the major road with a number of large developments under construction.

In 2010, the Christchurch City Council adopted the South-West Christchurch Area Plan, which encompasses the area. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, a number of large developments under construction include the Halswell Quarry Park, Westlake Reserve with sports facilities, Westmorland East Valley Reserve, and Halswell School. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

Greater Halswell is a medium-sized urban area, containing a number of residential and commercial areas. There are two main urban centers in the area, consisting of the Halswell Junction Road and West Halswell development. These areas are serviced by a number of large developments under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

There is a considerable amount of land within the area that has not been mapped for classification. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, a number of large developments under construction include the Halswell Quarry Park, Westlake Reserve with sports facilities, Westmorland East Valley Reserve, and Halswell School. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

Community environment

Social environment

Community organisations in this greater Halswell area continue operating following the earthquakes. Organisations have been active in areas such as social and economic development, community development, and social support. The Christchurch City Council has provided funding for community development organizations, with several organisations receiving grants to support their activities.

Organisations have been active in areas such as social and economic development, community development, and social support. The Christchurch City Council has provided funding for community development organizations, with several organisations receiving grants to support their activities.

Community development

Community organisations have been active in areas such as social and economic development, community development, and social support. The Christchurch City Council has provided funding for community development organizations, with several organisations receiving grants to support their activities.

Natural environment

The natural environment in this greater Halswell area is characterized by a number of large developments under construction. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, a number of large developments under construction include the Halswell Quarry Park, Westlake Reserve with sports facilities, Westmorland East Valley Reserve, and Halswell School. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

Earthquake impact analysis

The six schools provide services to locals as well as young people from beyond the area. The two primary schools and numerous early education centers are serviced by the area. Additionally, a number of large developments under construction include the Halswell Quarry Park, Westlake Reserve with sports facilities, Westmorland East Valley Reserve, and Halswell School. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

Social infrastructure mapping

Community resilience mapping

Future risks and opportunities

- Recovery opportunity
  - Community resilience principles

Community profile Greater Halswell Area

Greater Halswell is represented as the southern part of Christchurch. Located in an area known as the suburbs, small-scale of the city center on Stent Highway. In recent years, new subdivisions have created (urban) values and replaced the green belt separation from the city, including Christchurch's area.

With the south-west of Christchurch being one of the South Island's largest urban growth areas, the area of Christchurch's population has increased in recent years. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, there is a higher proportion of children aged 10 years and older (10,000 per 1,000) over water. The Halswell Junction Road is the major road with a number of large developments under construction.

In 2010, the Christchurch City Council adopted the South-West Christchurch Area Plan, which encompasses the area. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, a number of large developments under construction include the Halswell Quarry Park, Westlake Reserve with sports facilities, Westmorland East Valley Reserve, and Halswell School. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

Greater Halswell is a medium-sized urban area, containing a number of residential and commercial areas. There are two main urban centers in the area, consisting of the Halswell Junction Road and West Halswell development. These areas are serviced by a number of large developments under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.

There is a considerable amount of land within the area that has not been mapped for classification. The area is serviced by two primary schools and numerous early education centers. Additionally, a number of large developments under construction include the Halswell Quarry Park, Westlake Reserve with sports facilities, Westmorland East Valley Reserve, and Halswell School. These developments are under construction, with a number of large developments under construction.